Undoubtedly, Vijayan has a deep understanding of business. He has conceptualised and executed innovative HR practices and processes resulting in organisation building based on Vision and Values platform.

He has a track record of having worked in diverse organisation settings ranging from MNC to Indian and from single business units to conglomerates. He has been associated with enterprises of excellence starting with ICI, and going onto Novartis, Marico, Unilever Best Foods, IFFCO Group (UAE), AC Nielsen (UAE), Mahindra & Mahindra and finally, CHEP India (a Brambles company) where he was Director - Human Resources. Effective December 1, 2009, he has been attached to WE Business School (earlier known as Welingkar B School), Mumbai (ranked amongst the top 20 business schools in India) as Dean.

Vijayan's work is aptly exemplified by the organisation building and growth story of Marico, a company he was closely associated with for a decade between 1990 and 1999. During his tenure with the company, many innovations and best people practices were implemented resulting in, for one, the Palakkad factory being a union free location for over 9 years and even thereafter not having experienced any breakdown in management - employee relations. For another, the company witnessed the successful implementation of a job-rotation scheme, a practice that saw Vijayan, himself, taking on the mantle of General Manager - Manufacturing, Palakkad. National recognition of these efforts was not lagging behind. Marico won the National Human Resources Development Network (NHRDN) award for Best HR practices in 1994. Vijayan's responsibilities have been diverse - from HR & OD to quality - He was the Chief Company-wide TQM Facilitator between 1994 and 1996 - to manufacturing, but in none has he not delivered through commitment and innovative practice.
